

Occupations in turkey in 15 years

Türkiye

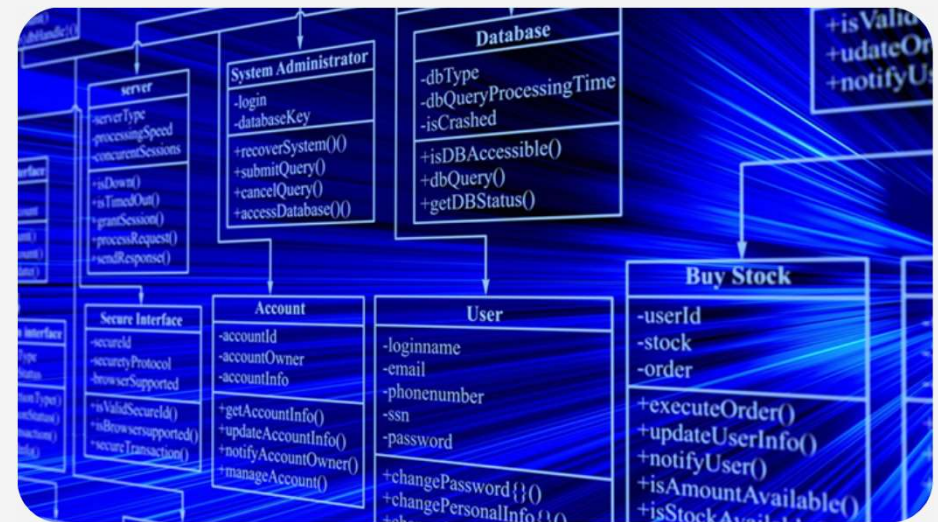

Companion

With the ever-developing biotechnology, it is expected that the life expectancy of people will increase and the rates of old age will increase. Therefore, the demand for people who will take care of and befriend people in need will naturally increase

Database Management

The need for managers who will ensure that companies' data is usable and secure and organize this data is increasing day by day. Database management, whose task is to manage systems such as sales, manufacturing, payroll and more in the corporate database, is among the professions that will gain popularity in the next 10 years.

Software Support Specialist

Software support specialists whose job is to provide information and support for internet-based applications; As well as working on computer programs, automation solutions and software, it can also give training on these.

Robotics engineering

Robotic engineering, which requires dealing with highly complex and technical designs, is a profession on the development of robot systems. Robot engineers, one of the most promising professions of the future, are responsible for the production, design and operation processes of robots.

Solar Energy System Technical Staff

Interest in alternative natural energy sources is on the rise globally, and the need for experts working on solar energy, the most popular of these natural sources, is also increasing. Considering the fact that solar energy will never run out, it can be said that solar energy technician is a highly guaranteed profession, which enables us to use the energy obtained from the sun's light and heat in the most effective way.

Robot Welding Operator

Robotic welding operator, which works according to the principles of the institution it is a member of, using tools and equipment in accordance with worker health and safety, environmental protection regulations, productivity and quality requirements of the profession, is one of the occupational groups whose demand is expected to increase in the near future.

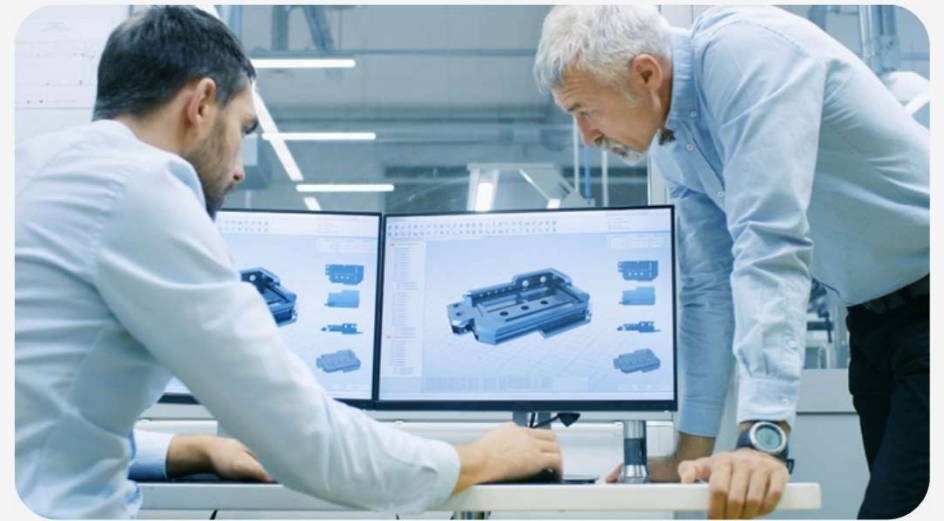

Cyber Security Expert

Cyber network and computer technologies are perhaps the fastest growing field today. As such, the need for personnel responsible for the protection of the electronic information system of the institution they work for increases. Cybersecurity professionals can find employment in both private and government agencies.

R&D engineer

R&D, that is, research and development engineers, who work on developing new systems suitable for the field in which companies operate, reducing costs and updating existing systems, which is another bright profession of the future on our list, are in charge of companies' R&D departments.

3D animation graphic designer

Three-dimensional animation graphic artists, who are multimedia artists who create three-dimensional models of designs or visuals of objects through software programs, also turn existing sketches and ideas into three-dimensional models. Three-dimensional animation graphic designers, whose demand is increasing day by day, can find employment opportunities in many different sectors such as medicine, architecture and engineering

E-commerce professional

E-commerce professional staff or responsible; It is a professional group that has internet and sales skills, can organize and manage online trade, and control e-commerce platforms. Considering that in the last few years, everyone has turned to online shopping, especially with the effect of the pandemic, we can say that the demand for e-commerce professional expertise will increase.

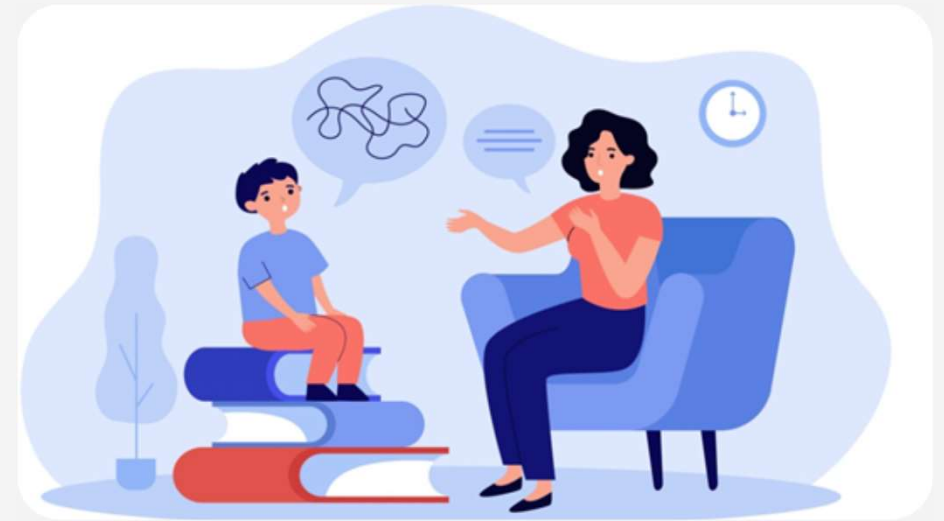

Digital Advertising

digital advertising; It is a sector that has been in demand in our country as well as in the world in recent years. Companies that want to reach their target audiences and customers now prefer to promote their products online, as the interest in televisions declines; Therefore, it is quite possible that this profession group will gain a solid place in the future.

Speech Language Therapist

Speech and language therapists are people who work in these areas by dealing with the prevention of problems in vocal communication and the therapy of people who have difficulties in this regard. This occupational group, which is slowly gaining popularity, is expected to rise gradually in the next few years.

Information Technology

Information technologies, which cover the practical processing of information and its transformation into useful services, have a very wide field of work.

Information technologies, consisting of software, services, equipment and hardware elements, ensure internal efficiency by enabling product and service development stages to be more efficient and human-oriented. In short, we can say that information technologies, which is a constantly developing and growing sector, have a very strong place.

